

Born To Be Wild (2015)

By Walt Wright

This is the second in a series I call “Personification”, others will follow. This little character makes me smile. I think it’s the wicked grin he displays as he zooms through the air, riding on a leaf from an Oak Leaf Hydrangea plant. The color spectrum this small painting reveals is nothing less than eye candy. It is dazzling to the retina with all the many colors corresponding together. As you study this 8 x 10 work, you’ll find yourself asking a question, “Could it be that he’s steering the leaf?” Of course the answer to that is in your heart. But one thing is certain... he’s having the time of his life. Perhaps like one of your children, this little fellow was definitely born to be wild!
