SUBTITLE: Tribute to literary work of George R. R. Martin

By Walt Wright

In this 18 x 24 painting the literary work of George R. R. Martin comes to life. His masterful writing skills have created a world of many characters, dilemmas, and surprises. This tribute painting features one of Khaleesi's dragons over the city known as Kings Landing. The colors are vibrant and the scene depicts action. The sense of depth is great and the colors follow the rules of the artist color wheel. The HBO television network has created a series based on George R. R. Martin's novels. It has captivated the world of entertainment and myself along with it.

My favorite phrase is found on an attached piece of parchment on the sign board which reads, "There is a savage beast that dwells in every man and it will stir when you place a sword in his hand." These words are spoken by the character known as Ser Jorah Mormont, in the storm of swords. I am very proud of this work as it has taken many weeks of labor and provided me with an incredible challenge. It is clear that winter has arrived and with it came much destruction.
