

Hummingbird (2015)

By Walt Wright

I have always been fascinated by birds. The hummingbird is one of my favorite birds to watch. My feeder is out early each spring in hopes of getting some of them to stick around. The flight of this small bird defies gravity in unimaginable ways. Not only are they fast, they can maneuver unlike any other. Their simple diet comprises of small gnats and other insects, as well as nectar from flowers or a feeder. There seems to be something mystical about them. When the light hits them just right it dazzles the eyes.

This painting was donated to The Arts Depot of Abingdon, Virginia. Its sale helps to keep the lights on and art alive in Abingdon. Thank you for supporting the arts!

