

JURASSIC 3D (2015)

By Walt Wright

Dinosaurs have intrigued the imagination for ages. The dangerous and harsh environment in which they had to exist makes it surprising they existed at all. Big and with jaws full of teeth it's a good thing they don't exist today. People would find they were back on the menu as far as the planetary food chain goes, not a pleasant thought. This painting was completed as a Christmas gift for Kaleb Allen. He is an inspiring and intelligent young boy with a talent for art himself. I hope this painting inspires him to maintain a creative and open mind as the future unfolds before him. Early man survived the saber tooth tiger and the mammoth, surely mankind today can overcome the danger and harshness in our lives.

This 10x8 painting is a continuation of my 3D series. I used linear alignment of many shades of cyan blue and red to create the sense of dimensional depth when viewed with 3D glasses. The other colors help to hold the focus of the image, since I am not using split imagery. Traditional 3D (red & blue lens) glasses are required for viewing the special effects. But only a sharp eye is needed to find the little secret I've hidden in Kaleb's painting.
